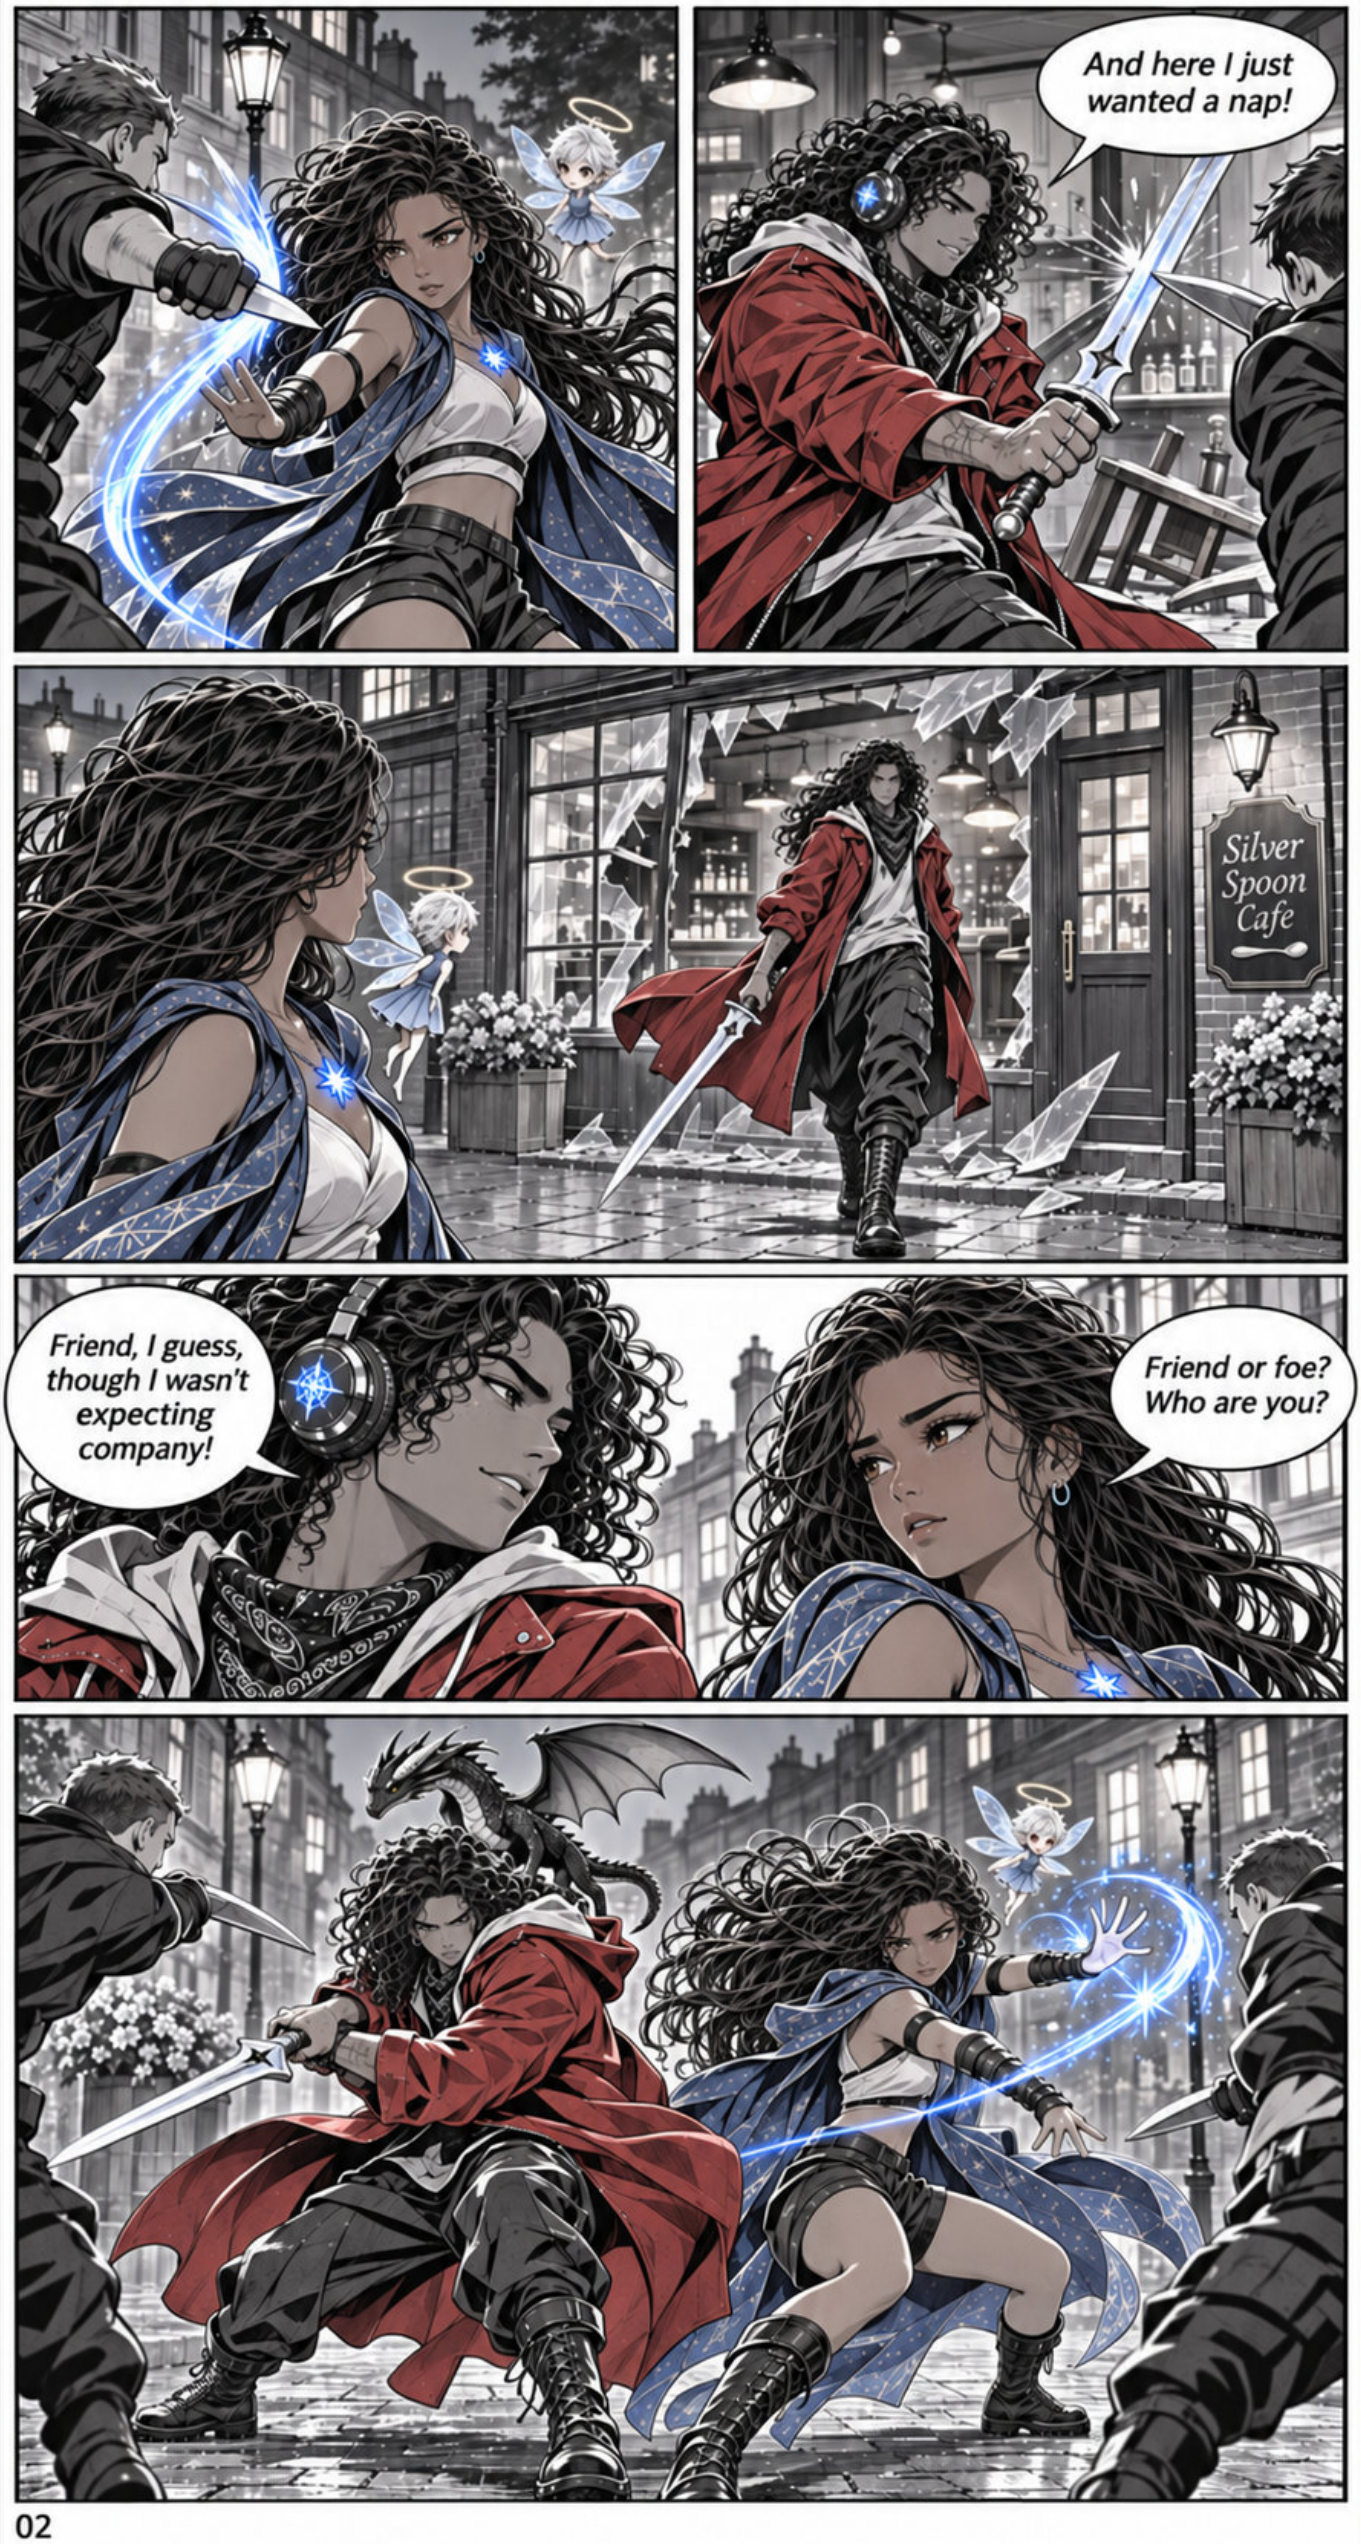
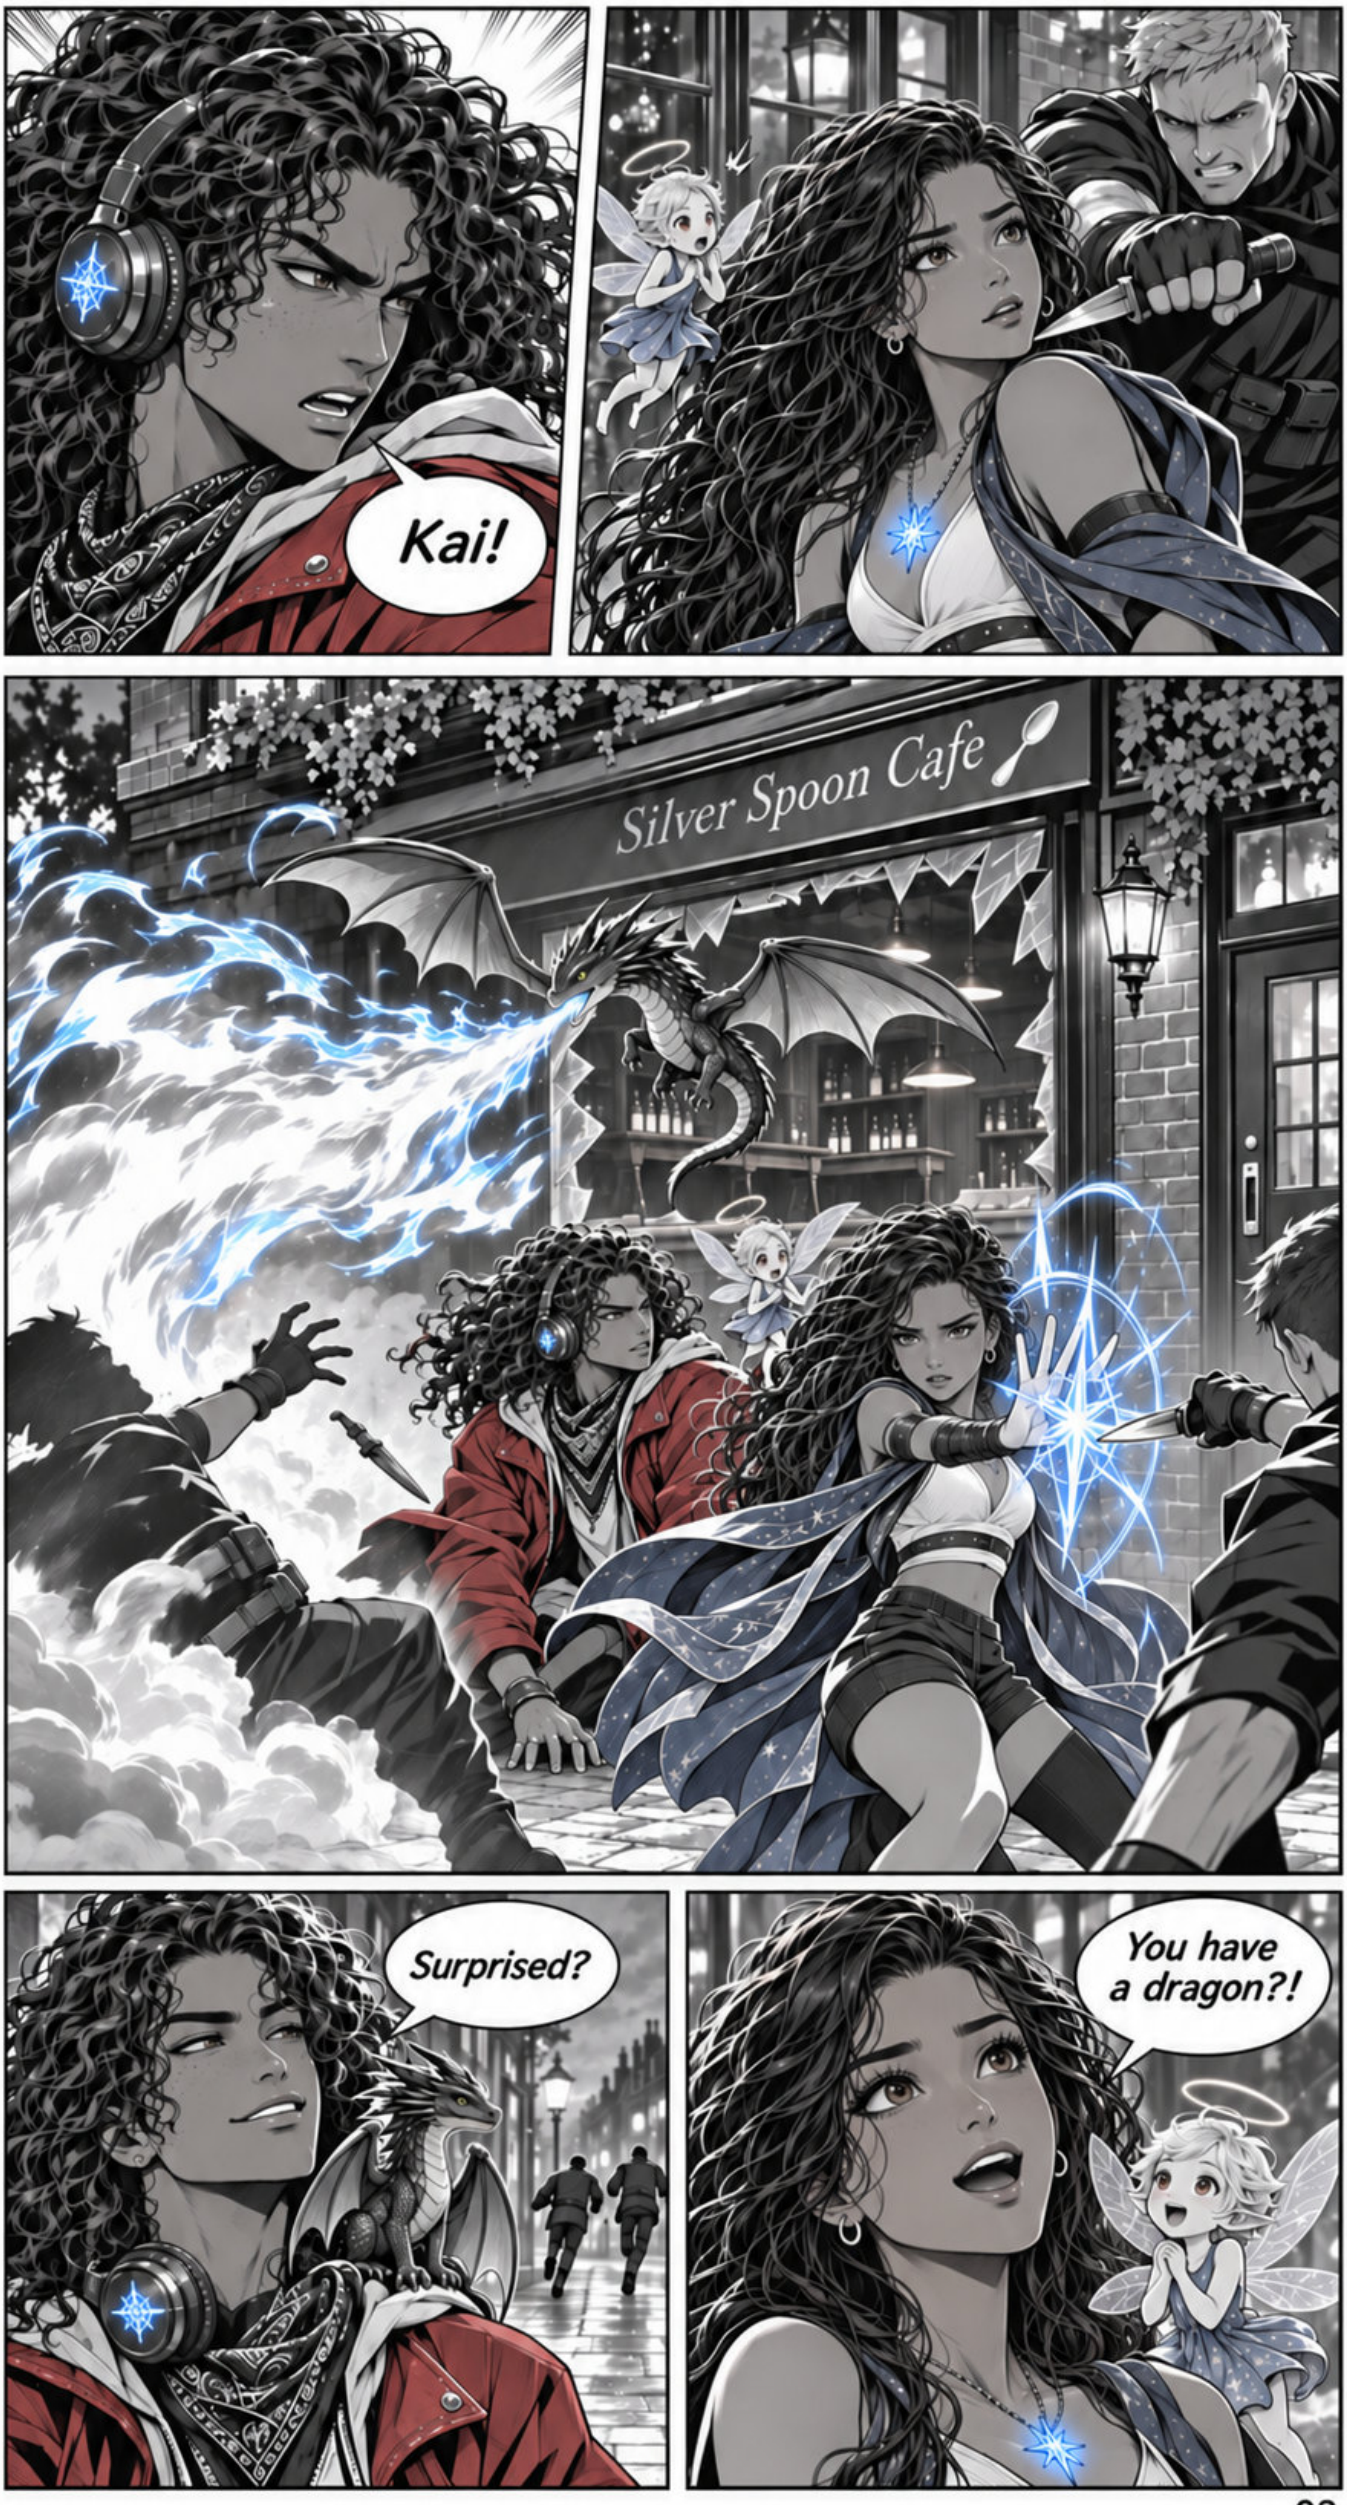
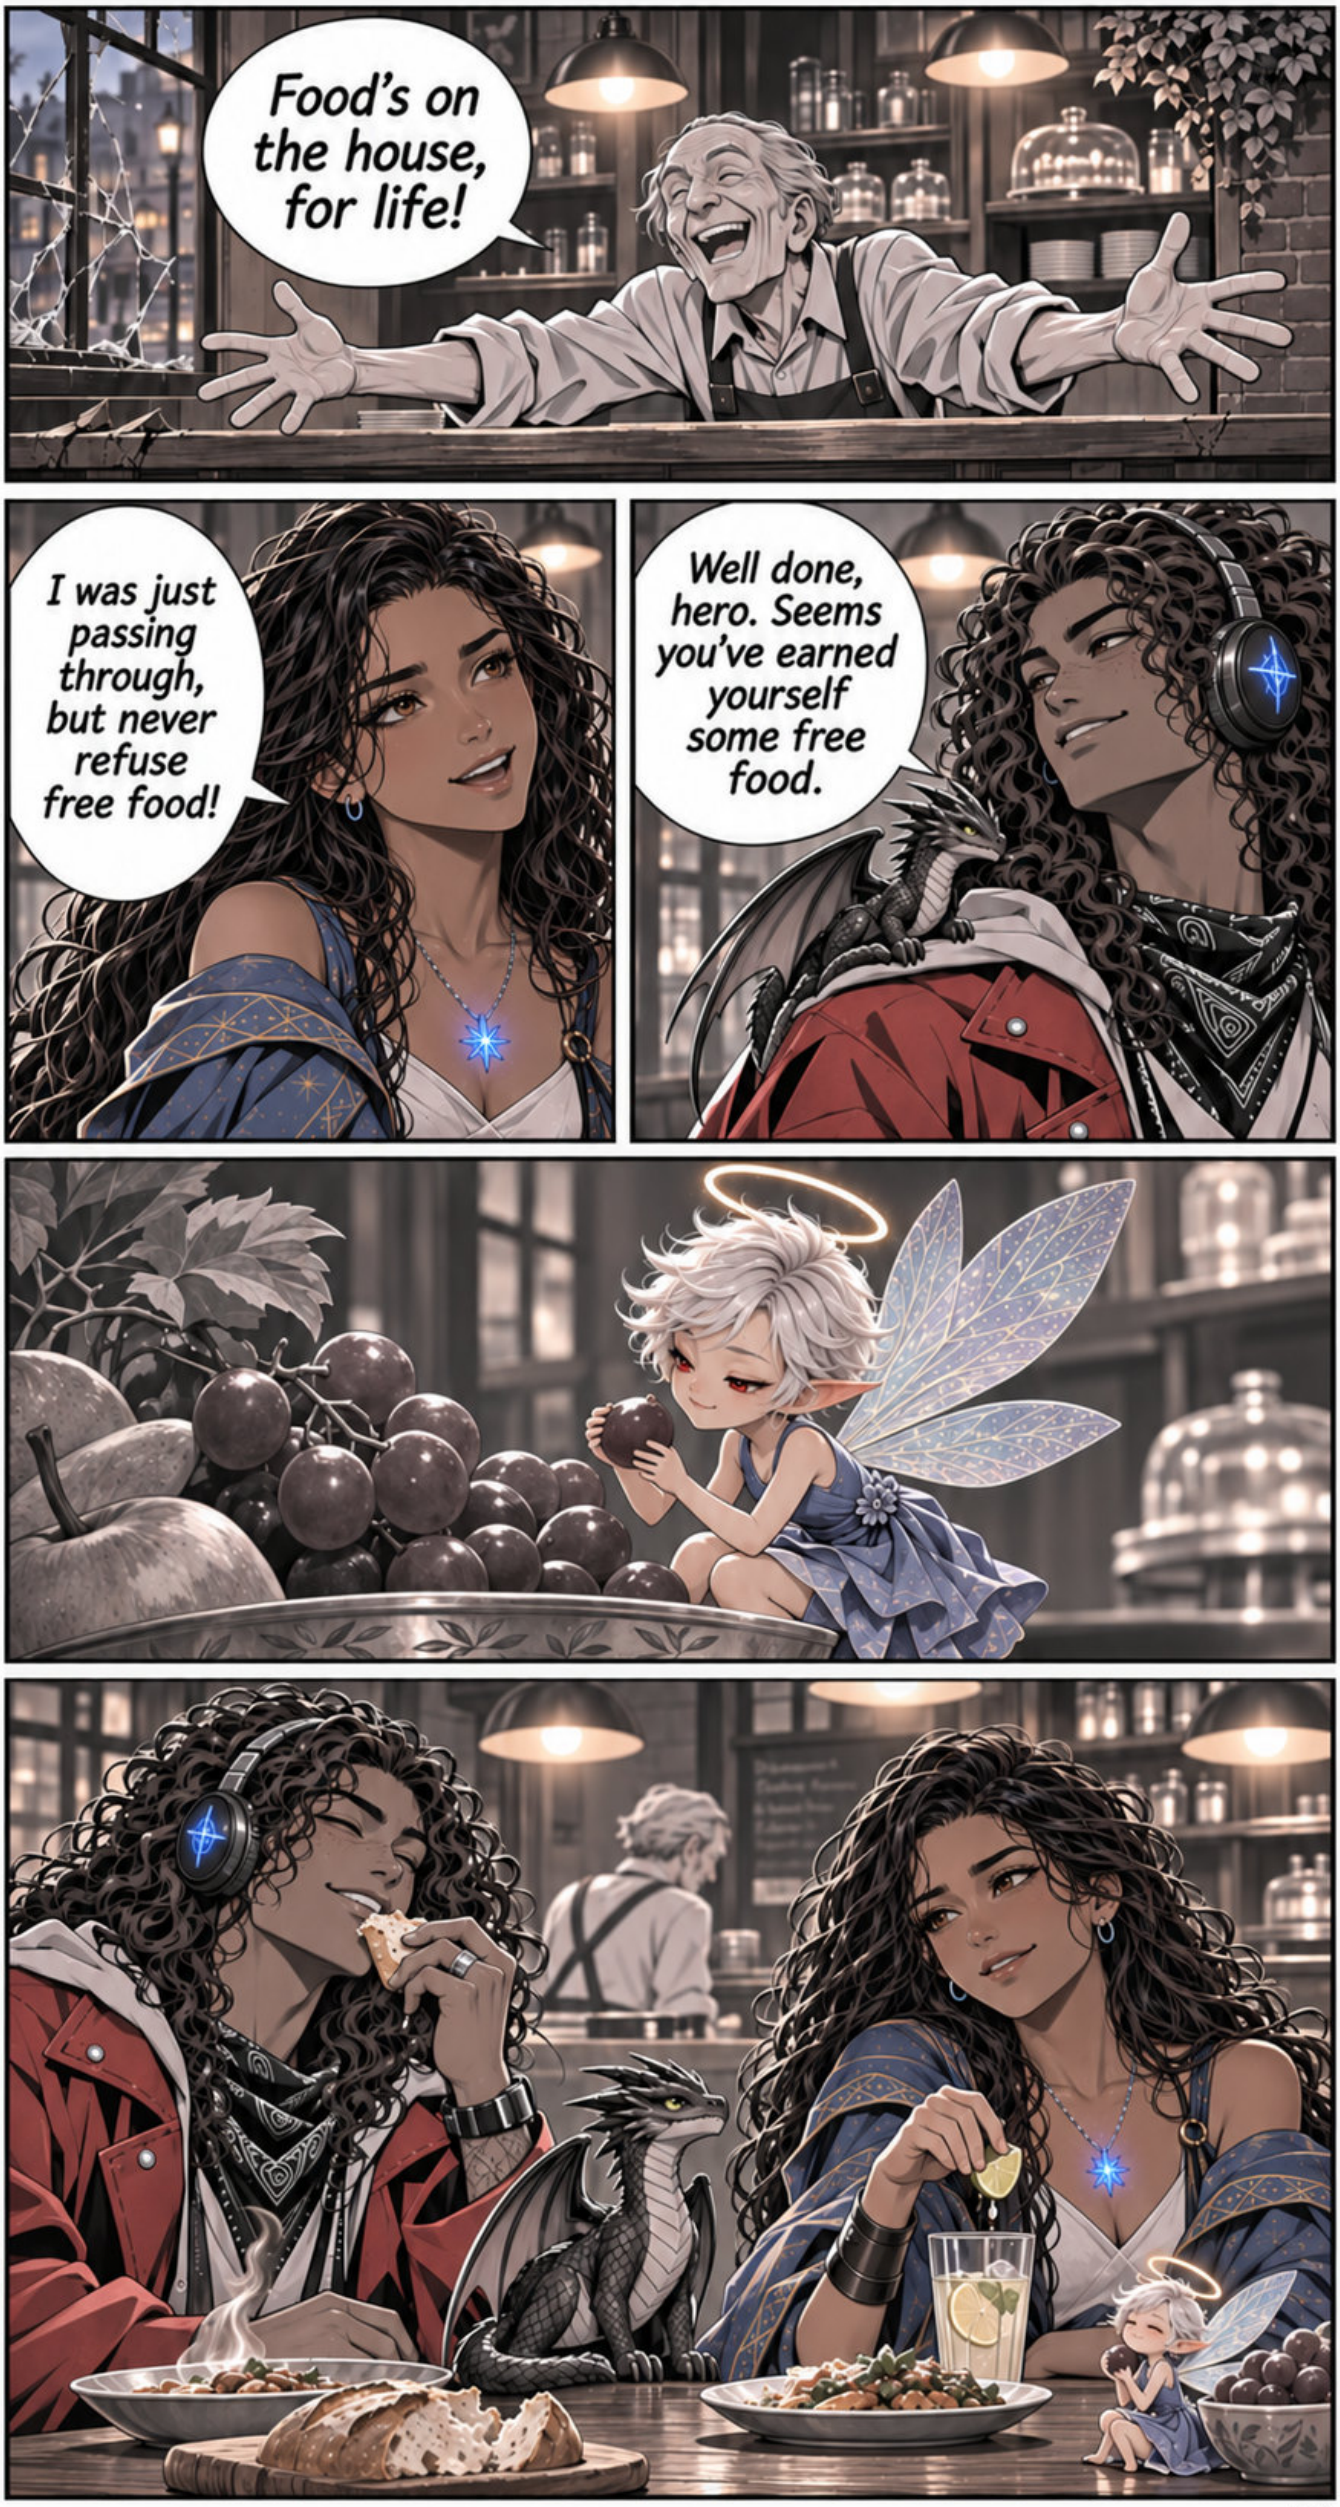
SILVER SPOON CAFE
Ah, the sweet sound of capitalism.
This ain't a hostel!
I'll comp your meals for a month!
We're searching for a girl...
Make it two months free and you've hired a hero.



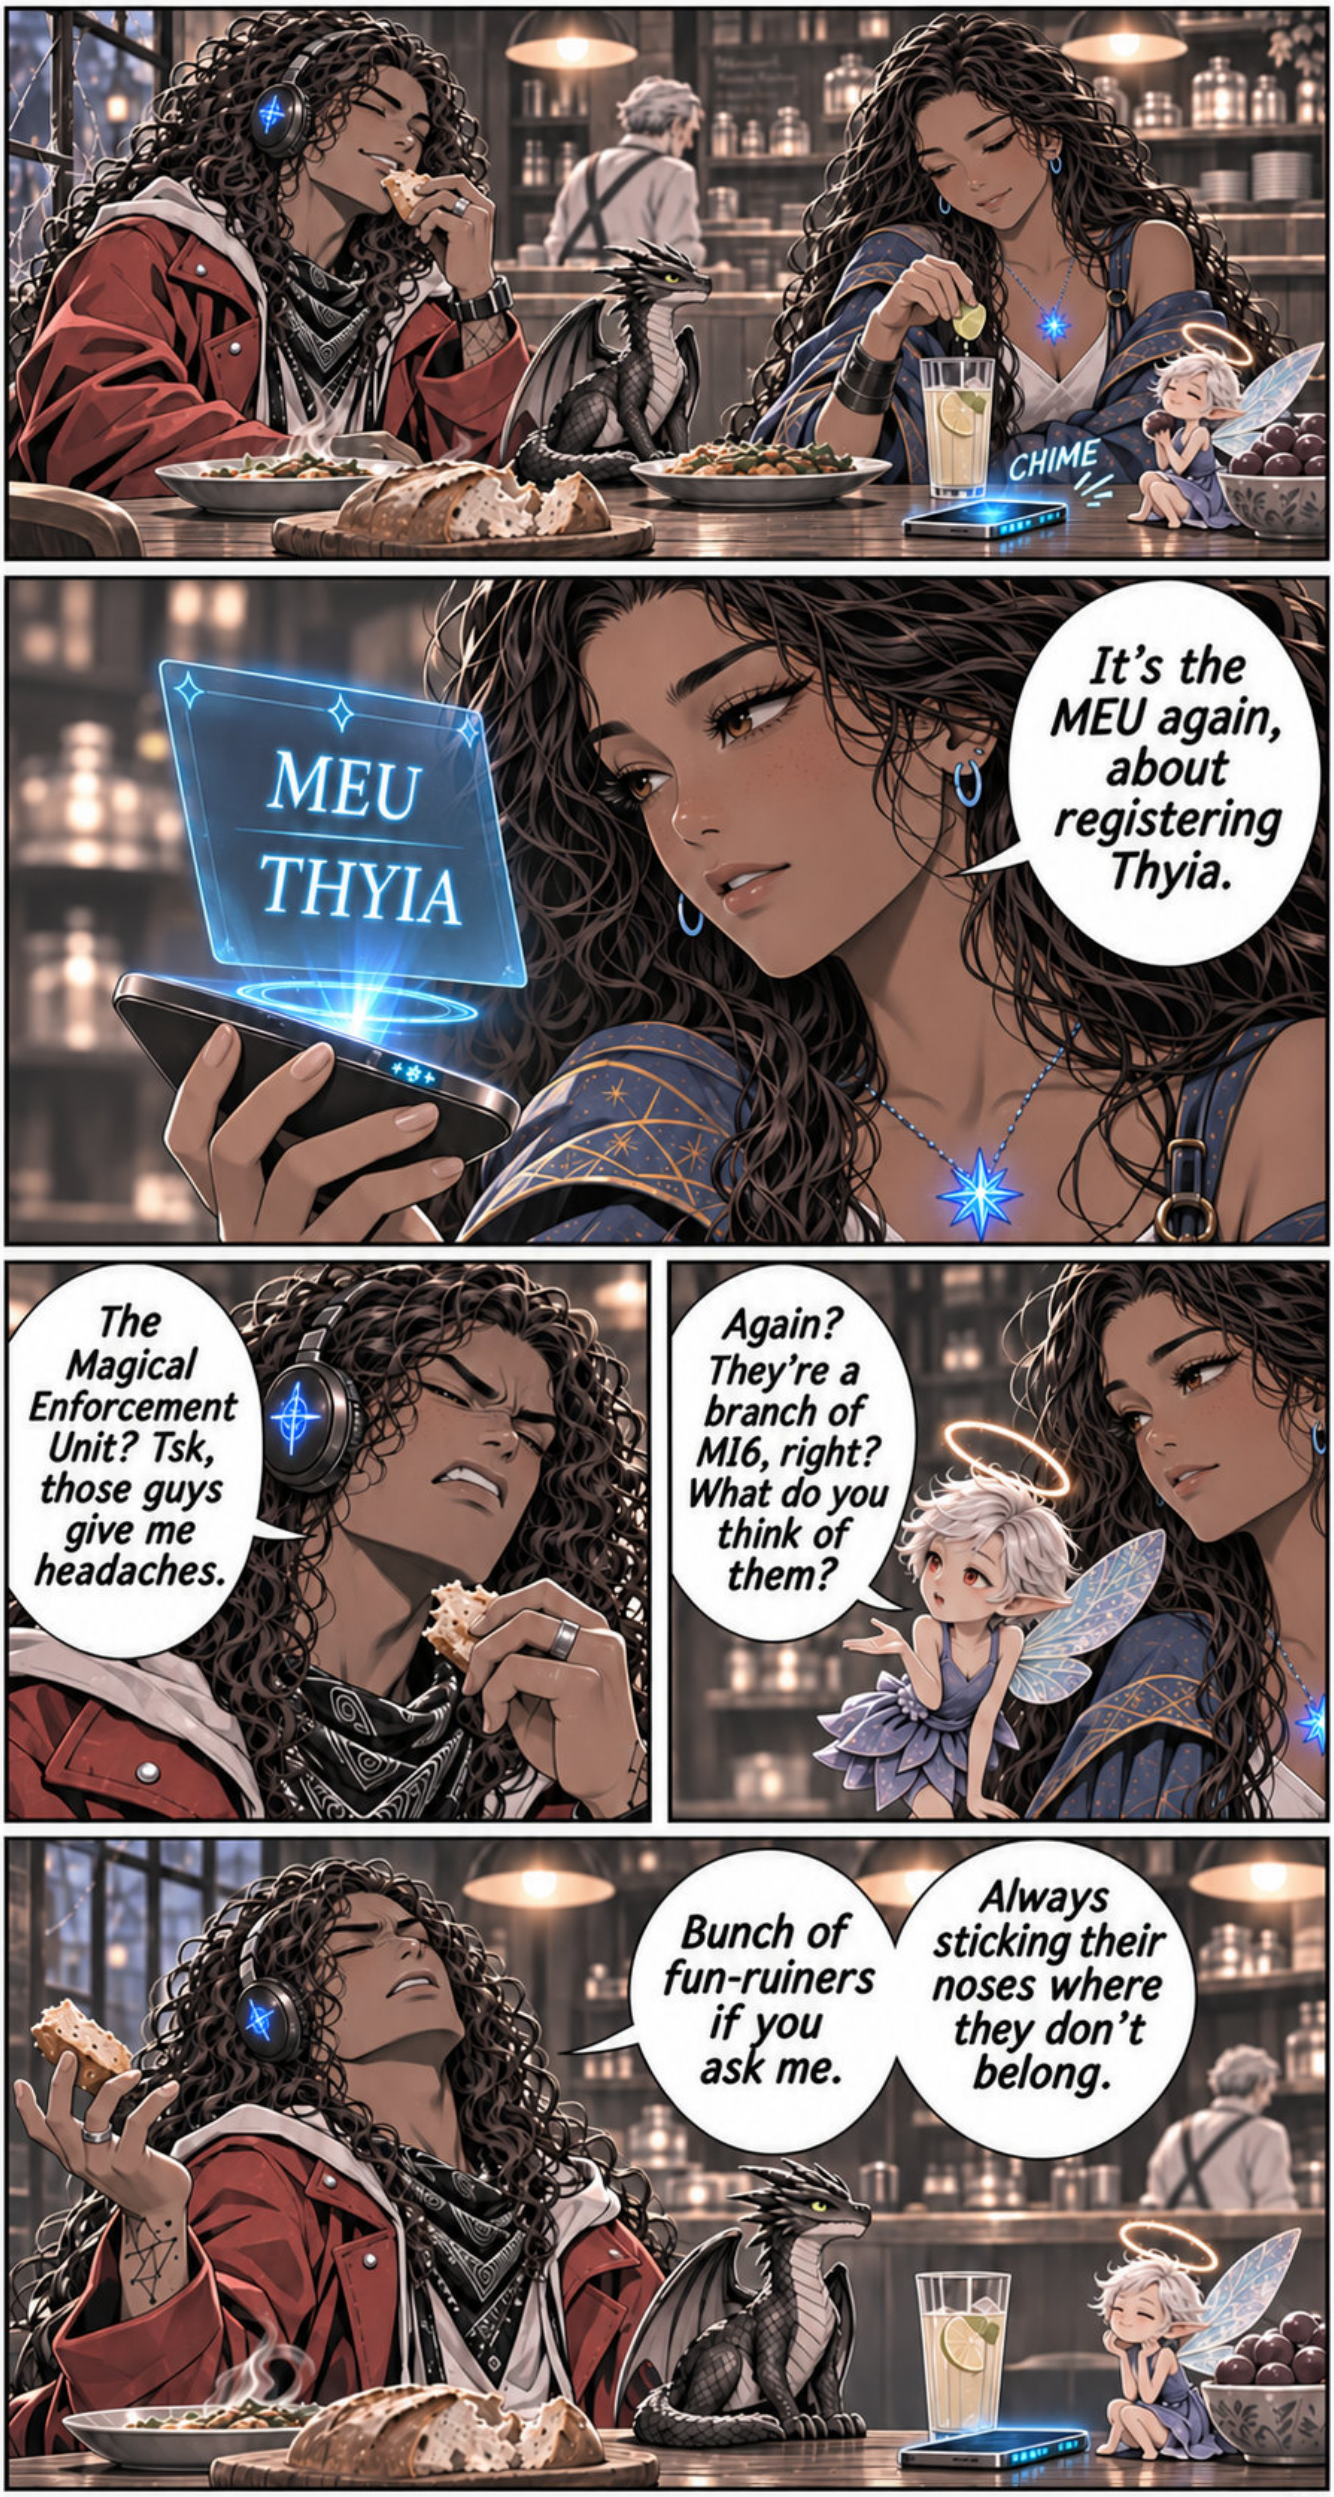
And here I just wanted a nap!
Silver Spoon Cafe
Friend, I guess, though I wasn't expecting company!
Friend or foe? Who are you?



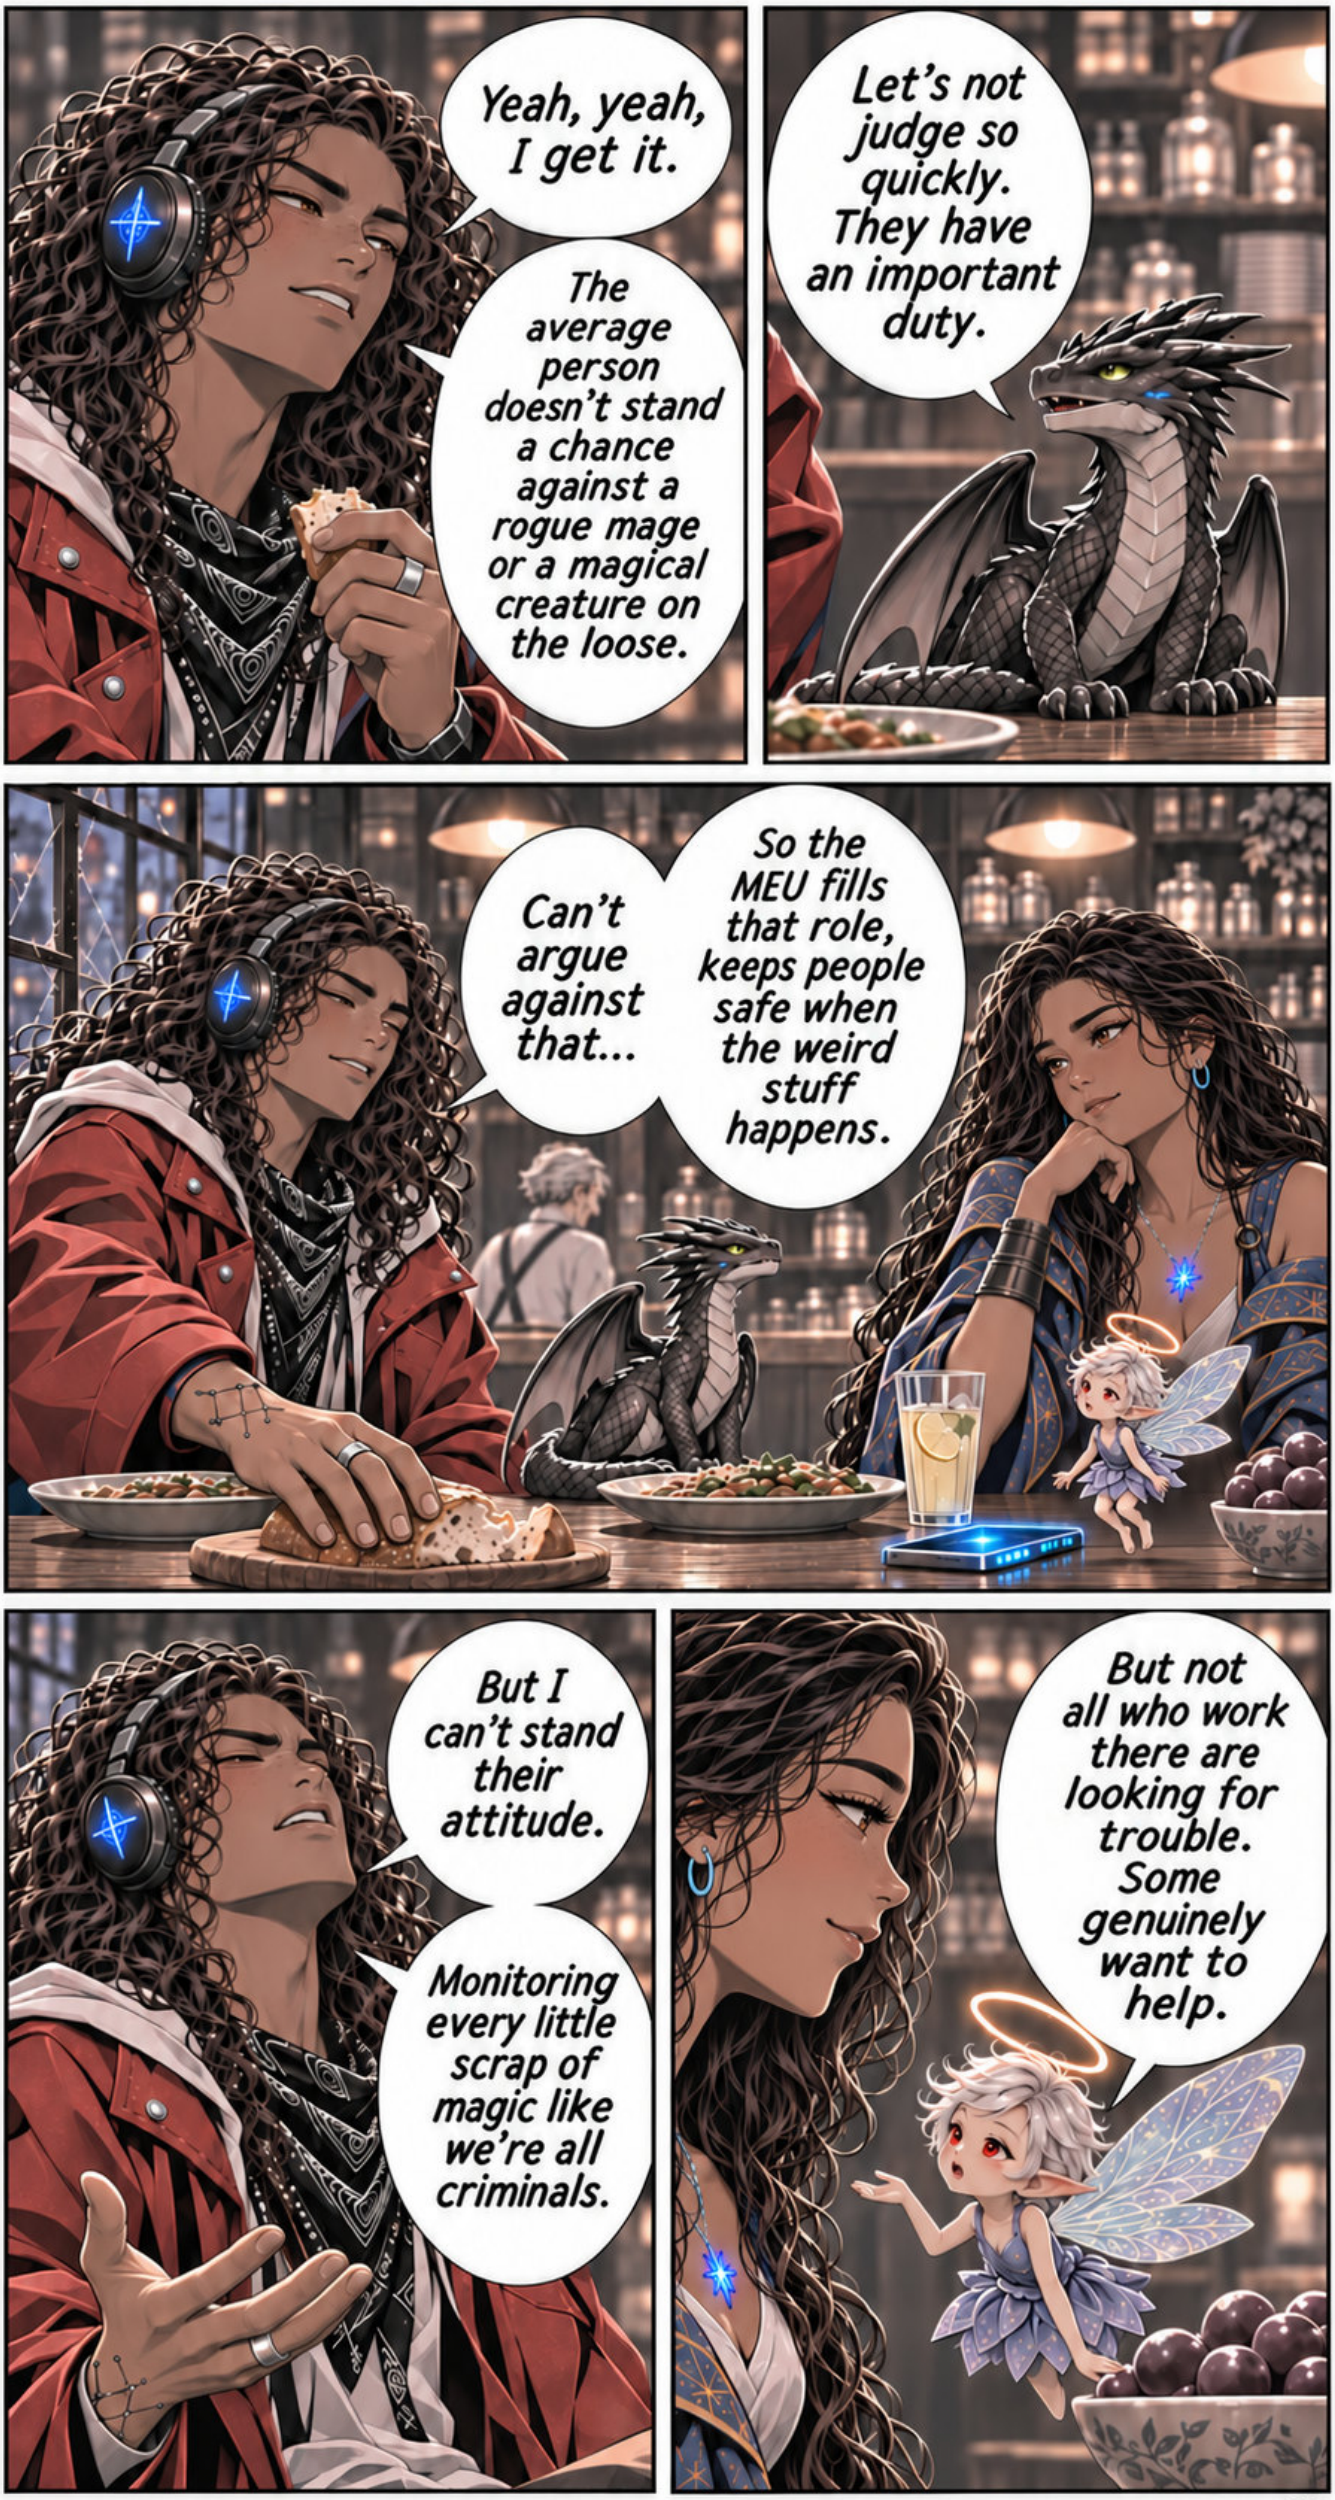
Kai!
Silver Spoon Cafe
Surprised?
You have a dragon?!



Food's on the house, for life!
I was just passing through, but never refuse free food!
Well done, hero. Seems you've earned yourself some free food.



CHIME
MEU
THYIA
It's the MEU again, about registering Thyia.
The Magical Enforcement Unit? Tsk, those guys give me headaches.
Again? They're a branch of MI6, right? What do you think of them?
Bunch of fun-ruiners if you ask me.
Always sticking their noses where they don't belong.



Yeah, yeah, I get it.
The average person doesn't stand a chance against a rogue mage or a magical creature on the loose.
Let's not judge so quickly. They have an important duty.
Can't argue against that...
So the MEU fills that role, keeps people safe when the weird stuff happens.
But I can't stand their attitude.
Monitoring every little scrap of magic like we're all criminals.
But not all who work there are looking for trouble. Some genuinely want to help.

...without some agent breathing down his neck about 'Unlicensed elemental manipulation.'
A guy can't even spark a joint with a flame spell...
I can see why that would be frustrating... do you come across them often?
Give me a fuckin' break.
'Registering Holy Items' and 'mandatory safe magic practices.'
I've butted heads with them plenty of times.
Usually about Vega.
Vega ain't theirs to control.
I tell them where they can shove their regulations.

It's a delicate matter. Be a good idea to stay off their radar.
Can't say I'll be inviting them round for tea anytime soon...
I steer clear of their path, and they stay out of mine...
Makes life easier for everyone... well, easier for me, at least.
More likely to be trading blows if our paths cross the wrong way.
Yes, let's avoid antagonising them...
